Overseas Crisis Management

EAIE | SEVILLE

A good overseas crisis management policy is essential and should meet the '4 C's':

- Clear
- Concise
- Current
- Communicated

Overseas Crisis Management

A good overseas crisis management policy addresses three key questions:

- How will you know?
- Who decides what action to take?
- How are actions implemented?

How will you know?

There are broadly two kinds of scenario:

- International incident e.g. political unrest, terrorist attack etc.
 - Widely reported in media, but does anyone have responsibility for monitoring the media?
 - Advice issued by government agencies.
- Personal incident affecting just 1 individual e.g medical emergency, victim of crime etc.
 - How or even can students contact you out of hours?

So now you are aware of the situation
who decides what actions to take?

- It's vital that in the event of a crisis situation there is either a member of staff or group of staff members who have the authority to decide how to act and to commit the necessary resources.
- Who this is could change based on the situation.
- Who else needs to be informed and how is this information cascaded?
- The 'Golden Hour'

How are actions implemented?

Emergency Evacuation Procedures

- How do you provide support to staff or students overseas?
- The right insurance package is vital, possibly supported by additional services.
- Duty of Care v.s. Duty of Loyalty
- e.g. Cairo 2013
- Important to establish rules prior to departure and to have participants sign a contract.
- Aftercare and follow-up
